BIOGRAPHY

Lynda is the founder and owner of TA Tribe, an online service providing Transactional Analysis (TA) training and supervision for coaches and consultants, trainers and teachers, managers and mental health practitioners.

She has spent her working life in various roles in organisations, setting up her learning and development consultancy (Triangle Partnership) in 1991. Since then, she has worked as a consultant, trainer and coach to organisations across public and private sectors, at all levels of leadership and across different specialist teams with multi-party contracts.

Lynda is a Certified Transactional Analyst (Organisational), and is also internationally qualified as a Teaching and Supervising Transactional Analyst. She has delivered TA workshops throughout the UK, in the USA, Russia, Ukraine, Rome, Romania, Spain, Prague and Poland.

TA TRIBE was founded by Lynda in 2016 in order to make TA training and supervision more accessible and affordable to those in the 'helping professions', reaching across physical and cultural boundaries. And being kinder to the planet in the process. She is currently developing a programme of podcasts based on her Focus papers series.

Lynda has been conducting supervision sessions since 2008. She has also contributed a chapter to the book 101 Coaching Supervision Techniques (etc) published by Routledge. She is Deputy Programme Director for the MSc in Professional Development (Developmental TA), a work-based learning programme accredited through the International Centre for TA Qualifications – of which she is a founding member. As well as her TA qualifications, Lynda has a post-graduate Diploma in Training Management, a Diploma in Supervision and a BA (Hons).

Lynda takes care to model the positive behaviours of the relational leadership approach that she has cultivated through her own journey of qualifying at the highest level in TA.

She encourages, challenges respectfully and invites people to make positive choices for personal growth and is passionate about mental health in general and TA in particular – and supporting others to reach their potential is something which gives her great satisfaction and joy.
